

NC STATE UNIVERSITY

IEEE FELLOW

NC State University's Department of
Computer Science congratulates
Dr. George Rouskas

Rouskas named IEEE Fellow

Congratulations to Dr. George N. Rouskas, professor of computer science at North Carolina State University, for his recent recognition as an IEEE Fellow.

Rouskas, who joined NC State in 1994, is a highly regarded and well-funded researcher in optical network design and networking. His work in optical networks has become increasingly important in a technical landscape that relies heavily on wireless networking.

Rouskas is the Department of Computer Science's sixth IEEE Fellow. He joins Drs. Donald Bitzer (1982), Wushow "Bill" Chou (1987), Mladen Vouk (2001), Munindar Singh (2008) and Harry Perros (2009).

The rank of Fellow is awarded by the IEEE board of directors to members of the organization with extraordinary records of accomplishment in a technology field. IEEE, the world's largest professional society for the advancement of technology, has more than 400,000 members in more than 160 countries.
